AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF COMMUNITY PSYCHIATRISTS
Revised October, 2006

Preamble

This is an organization formed for the purpose of addressing issues faced by psychiatrists in community practice in an effort, ultimately, to ensure the provision of quality patient care.

Article I

The name of this Association, hereafter referred to as AACP, shall be the American Association of Community Psychiatrists. A community psychiatrist shall be defined as a psychiatrist in community practice. Community practice shall be defined as the practice of psychiatry, in any setting, with a commitment to the goal of providing care to populations in need, regardless of ability to pay.

The AACP has the following purposes:

- (1) To promote and maintain excellence in the care of patients through the organization of psychiatrists in community practice.
- (2) To increase the number of well-qualified psychiatrists choosing careers in community practice.
- (3) To help clarify and solve mutual problems related to community psychiatric practice.
- (4) To inform and educate the public about the role of the community psychiatrist in the care of the mentally ill.
- (5) To establish liaison with related professional organizations.
- (6) To foster regional and local groups interested in community psychiatric practice.
- (7) To encourage research in psychiatry within community practice.

Section 3.

Honorary members shall be those distinguished individuals who may or may not be a psychiatrist in community practice, as defined in Article I but whose association with the organization would be of extraordinary value to it. Honorary members who are not psychiatrists may serve as consultants to the Board, to the Assembly, or to any AACP Committee.

Election to honorary membership in the AACP will be in recognition of outstanding contribution over a period of years to community practice. Such contribution will usually be manifest through recognition of achievement in two or more of the following areas:

- Representation of the concerns of community psychiatrists in organizations of the psychiatric profession.
- Innovative local community leadership and community program development.
- Contribution to training and career development of community psychiatrists.
- Contribution to the psychiatric literature which advances understanding of special roles and skills relevant to clinical or administrative work in community psychiatry.
- Contribution to public awareness and support for community programs.

A nomination for honorary membership is to be accompanied by a written statement of qualifications.

Section 4.

Liaison members shall be those individuals who are not psychiatrists in community practice but who share in the commitment to the goals of the Association. Applicants must receive the approval of the Membership Committee and subsequently be elected by majority vote of the Executive Committee. Section 8.

Dues for general members and members-in-training will be fixed at the first annual meeting of the AACP and may be changed at any subsequent annual meeting.
