Violence and Behavioral Health: Developing an Evidence-Informed Community Agenda

October 27, 2014
Sheraton Station Square
300 West Station Square Drive
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Course Director:

Loren H. Roth, MD, MPH
Introduction:

The overlap of mental illness and violence has emerged as an issue of major importance on the clinical, community and public health levels with serious implications for the legal system and society overall. This conference will feature keynote presentations by Edward Mulvey, PhD and David Kolko, PhD both of whom have done definitive research in this area. It will also include workshops bringing together experts and community representatives to examine and discuss related topics. It aims at facilitating the translation of research findings into clinical practice with an examination of what more needs to be known and potentially done with a view toward prevention. It hopes to provide participants with a greater understanding of the relationship between mental illness and violence and measures the community can undertake to recognize and diffuse potentially violent situations.

Who Should Attend:

The conference is aimed at behavioral health professionals, including clinicians (psychiatrists, psychologists, nurses, social workers, counselors); policymakers; administrators of governmental and service provider agencies; law enforcement representatives; and family and advocacy organization members.

Educational Objectives: At the conclusion of the program, participants should be able to

- Demonstrate an improved understanding of the connection between mental disorder and violence.
- Improve engagement of violent and potentially violent mentally ill patients and their families in the process of treatment.
- Direct families and children to best evidence based interventions to prevent violence and aggressive behavior.
